

Culture and Art>>

Turkish series Resurrection: Ertugrul to start season 5

Economy>>

Turkey biggest contributor to Europe's air traffic

Sports>>

Istanbul's Fun Run to attract thousands

98 YEARS

ANADOLU POST

Wednesday, November 7, 2018

WEATHER / ANKARA
Wednesday, Sunny 17°C

Erdogan slams sanctions on Iran

Turkish president: We don't want to in an imperialist world

By Muhammet Emin Avundukluoglu

ANKARA - Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan on Tuesday said U.S. sanctions on Iran were "not right". Following a parliamentary group meeting, Erdogan told reporters: "We do not find the sanctions right. Because our opinion is that these sanctions aim at destroying the world's balance," said Erdogan. Erdogan stressed that the U.S. sanctions on Iran contradict with the international law and diplomacy. "We don't want to live in an imperialist world," he added. Washington announced new sanctions on Monday targeting Iran's energy and financial sectors along with its shipping industry. More than 700 individuals, entities, aircraft, and vessels were blacklisted, including 50 Iranian banks and their domestic and foreign subsidiaries. The U.S. government granted China, Greece, India, Turkey, Italy, Japan, South Korea and Taiwan a 180-day waiver for importing Iranian oil, which eased worries of supply reduction in the global markets after the sanctions went into effect. Erdogan also criticized the U.S. patrols which began in northeastern Syria on Monday. "It is impossible that we accept these [patrols]. Furthermore, such a situation would lead to serious negativity along the borders," said Erdogan. The patrols come after the Turkish military shelled... MORE DETAILS

Turkey, Iran may trade in local currencies

By Dilara Zengin and Aysenur Saglam

ANKARA - The U.S. re-imposition of sanctions on Iran has raised discussion of conducting trade in local currencies with Turkey. Washington announced new sanctions on Monday targeting Iran's energy and financial sectors along with its shipping industry. More than 700 individuals, entities, aircraft, and vessels were blacklisted, including 50 Iranian banks and their domestic and foreign subsidiaries. The U.S. government granted China, Greece, India, Turkey, Italy, Japan, South Korea and Taiwan a 180-day waiver for importing Iranian oil, which eased worries of supply reduction in the global markets after... MORE DETAILS

OPINION

'Belarus, Turkey will explore Antarctica together'

By Dmitri Chirciu

ANKARA - Belarus and Turkey will explore Antarctica together, an official of the Belarus science committee said Tuesday. Sergei Shcherbakov, the deputy chairman of the State Committee on Science and Technology of the Republic of Belarus said: "The scientists [from Turkey and Belarus] which we will send [to Antarctica] in future, will conduct research on topics such as climate change, ice core and various bacteria."

Shcherbakov and the Belarusian scientists accompanying him evaluated their talks at the Turkish Industry and Technology Ministry on high technological machinery training, computer engineering, optical and laser technology to Anadolu Agency. MORE DETAILS

What's wrong with America?

By Hussain Abdul-Hussain

WASHINGTON D.C. - A bloody weekend in America followed a week of suspense, during which bombs were intercepted in the mail. By Sunday evening, 13 Americans had been killed, several injured, a string of assassinations-by-mail averted, and three Americans were in custody awaiting trial. Throughout the week, pipe bombs were mailed to leaders of the Democratic Party, including two former U.S. presidents. By Friday, police had managed to trace the bombs to one of the Republican supporters of President Donald Trump. The list of bomb recipients was composed of American personalities whom Trump had made a target of his vitriol. On Saturday, a white supremacist entered a Synagogue in Pennsylvania with an assault rifle and three handguns. He opened fire, killing 11 and injuring many others. He was subdued and taken to court on charges of hatecrime. On Sunday, another white supremacist -- this one in Kentucky -- tried to commit a hate massacre by forcing his way into a church with a predominantly African-American congregation. When he failed, he went to a nearby store, shot dead a 69 year-old African-American in front of his 12 year-old grandson, and fled to a nearby parking lot, where he ran across another African-American, whom he also killed. Police later arrested the white supremacist murderer. America's bloody weekend came amidst reports showing a spike in hate crimes. According to the Anti-Defamation League, hate crimes against American Jews have increased, this year, by 57 percent. But hate crimes do not spike by themselves. Their uptick requires agitation, which many believe to have been on the rise since the election of President Donald Trump in 2016. Since he first ran for office in 2015, Trump has used all kinds of verbal abuse against... MORE DETAILS